Organizations and individuals in this invitation have not been approached or asked for an endorsement. In the future they will be approached to assess interest, exchange information and consider local partnerships within and between countries as best practice models for international human rights law on freedom of religion or belief.

PROPOSAL FOR DISCUSSION

- There can be no adequate understanding of the most important issues we face when disciplines are cloistered from one another and operate on their own premises. It would be far more effective to bring together people working on questions of religion, politics, history, economics, anthropology, sociology, literature, art, religion and philosophy to engage in comparative analysis of common problems. As the curriculum is restructured, fields of inquiry and methods of investigation will be transformed. - Mark C. Taylor, Chairman of the Religion Department, Columbia University, New York.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION

The Al Akhawayn University School of Humanities & Social Sciences, and the Islamic Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (ISESCO) Science and Cultural & Communications Directorates.

Agenda: (1) Proposal for Discussion, (2) Strategies and Obstacles to a multi-disciplinary approach to human rights and freedom of religion or belief at Al Akhawayn University, (3) Morocco Universal Periodic Review, (4) Response to the draft plan of action for the Second Phase Human Rights Education proposed by the U.N. Human Rights Council in September 2010 (A/HRC/15/28).

Draft plan of action for the second phase (2010-2014) of the World Programme for Human Rights Education (A/HRC/15/28): U.N. Human Rights Council

(b) Teaching and learning processes and tools

27. Introducing or improving human rights education in the higher education system requires adopting a holistic approach to teaching and learning, by integrating programme objectives and content, resources, methodologies, assessment and evaluation; by looking beyond the classroom and the higher-education institution to society; and by building partnerships between different members of the academic community and beyond.

(v) Develop multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary human rights academic programmes. 20

²⁰ Multidisciplinary programmes would include the study, research and engagement with human rights from different disciplinary perspectives, such as philosophy, sociology, languages, international and domestic law, etc. Interdisciplinary programmes would entail the crossing of boundaries between disciplines and the pooling of approaches and methodologies to study, research and engage with human rights with a new integrated perspective.

The Questionnaire is a checklist for inclusive and genuine dialogue on human rights and freedom of religion or belief to prepare Tandem Forums for Places of Worship, Academic Discourse, Schools, Women and Civil Society. It is helpful but not necessary to complete the Questionnaire to attend the 2nd Minneapolis-St. Paul Area Forum for Places of Worship.
